Former Brooklyn Pitcher Shuts Out Old Mates With Three Hits

Mails Gets Revenge on Squire Ebbets by Winning Closest Game of Series; Inability of the Dodgers to Score Again Proves Their Undoing

By Grantland Rice

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—The authentic statistics in the case seem to be that unless the disappearing Dodgers can trim Stanley Coveleskie in the seventh game, the series will conclude abruptly around 3:45 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. When "Duster" Mails upset Sherrod Smith in today's battle by the score of 1 to 0, the big Cleveland southpaw crowded Brooklyn out on the end of a dead limb that is now cracking in two spots.

The eminent side-wheelers were locked together like a pair of grizzlies, but Mails, holding Brooklyn to three hits, deserved to win. Smith fought back gamely in front of fancy support, but the lights blew out in the sixth when Speaker singled with two gone and Burns drove the brilliant Texas over with a long double to left.

It was at precisely this moment that Brooklyn's chance to win the series passed to assume a moribund aspect. With Mails stopping each Dodger in his tracks there was nothing else to it, and the victorious upstart that came from the big crowd was to all intents and purposes a championship man, the exultant howl of the tribe denoting the big kill.

Offensive Lacks Power

The Dodgers dropped their third battle in a row upon Cleveland soil for the same old reason—inability to score. In three Cleveland games they have contributed exactly two tallies to the cause of Brooklyn humanity.

Coveleskie held them to one run on Saturday, and while they tapped him Bagby for fourteen hits yesterday, the best they could do from this salvo of swats was another grand tally. In their third effort they fell to three hits and nothing else. So with Coveleskie and his Polish spitter waiting in the offing to-morrow you can figure for yourself just what the outlook is.

The story is simple enough. The Dodger attack has gone to pieces. Their batting has been entirely too light and their base running has been a joke. They never have been able to start a concentrated drive and keep it going for even an inning. In the six games played they have scored but eight runs, hardly more than a run to a battle. Their defensive play has been exceptionally good, with both Kilduff and Olson starring and with the entire outfield on the job, but you don't collect runs through any fancy fielding.

Sherrod Smith fell to a hopeless enterprise in his second start, and he had shut out the Indians for a dozen innings the best he would have drawn was a tie. He never had a chance to win with Mails breaking up the Brooklyn attack in the fourth. The local crowd, once in a while Mails gave indications of impending wildness, but the Dodgers refused to wait him out.

Dodgers Miss Chance

In the fourth, for one notable example, Burns slipped with one out and Kilduff walked to fourth on balls. Here, if at all, was the spot for Mails to blow. But Kilduff, in his eagerness to start something, couldn't wait. He went after two bad balls well away from the plate, and the Cleveland southpaw then had time to get his bearings and settle down.

From that point on the big left-hander who saved Cleveland's fading pennant hopes, with six straight victories, was unbeatable. In the last five innings he allowed but one hit, making his record more and more control into a death sentence for Brooklyn's championship desire.

Outside of Mails the big factor in Cleveland's success was the great work of George Burns. The first baseman not only scored Speaker with a winning double, but his play around the bag was jam up all through the afternoon.

Sherrod Smith spent most of the afternoon in a peevish mood. Through innuendo he complained bitterly of Empire Connolly's judgment on balls and strikes, and on still another occasion he hurled his bat back to the dugout after Connolly had called him out. But this apparently didn't affect his pitching, which ordinarily would have been sound enough to win. The greatest pitcher in the world can't win without runs.

Crowds Storm Park

One of the greatest crowds of the series stormed the ball park again, and after every square inch of space had been taken, the thousands still stood in line outside in the vain hope of easing in. Through the haze of Indian summer afternoon you could see hundreds perched upon the eaves of nearby roofs or clinging to the swaying limbs of Ohio maples. The slogan here had been "four straight at night." Every fan in the community wanted to see the third reel properly completed.

As a result of her light hitting and lighter scoring, Brooklyn's case to-night was desperate. Cleveland needs but one more game and Coveleskie is ready, after a two day's rest, to pick up where he left off on Saturday. Brooklyn, on the other hand, must win three in a row by beating Coveleskie, Bagby and Mails, the trio who have held her to a brace of underfired runs in the three games to date.

In the meanwhile Mails' revenge is complete. In 1917 the Dodgers cast him aside as one unworthy of their select pitching society. Back in Brooklyn last week Cleveland's "Duster" had hammered out. Mails held the Dodgers scoreless for seven innings.

No phase of football probably is more under discussion among coaches and followers at the present time than the direct passing system. Many argue it is the only game. There are just as many equally certain the full use of the quarterback is the better game. Our own preference is for the direct pass, our main contention being that it speeds up the attack.

Consider these two groups—(1) Pittsburgh, Penn State, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia, Navy, New York University. (2) Yale, Harvard,

Cast-Offs Who Achieved Victory Over Dodgers

Cleveland Fans Reward Indians For Fine Playing

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—Just before today's game Mayor Fitzgerald, noting for local fans, presented Elmer Smith and Bill Wambagans with diamond-studded medals for their great work yesterday. Wambagans made an unassisted triple play and Smith hit a homer with the bases full.

More baseball scandal developed today. When Les Nunamaker, utility catcher with Cleveland, went to bed last night he found a roll of bills under his pillow. He reported the matter to President Johnson of the American League, who immediately seized the roll for evidence.

How much was in the roll? Sixteen Confederate dollar bills!

This Speaker is the only player now in the game who witnessed the two unassisted triple plays made in the big leagues. Speaker was with Boston when Neale Ball made his play here in 1900, and was in centerfield yesterday. "Cy" Young, who pitched for Boston against Cleveland when Ball put out three men unassisted, was in the stands yesterday.

The Cleveland players bought Jim Dunn, owner of the club, a pair of diamond-studded cuff links and Speaker a gold watch.

Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War and former Mayor of Cleveland, occupied a box in the upper stands with a party of friends. He was rooting for the Indians.

After the thrilling game yesterday tickets for today's contest were in greater demand than ever. Scalpers had no trouble getting $50 for a $6.00 seat.

Miller, the Brooklyn catcher, twice outgassed Cleveland. In the first inning, with Evans on first, he called for a pitch out and easily caught the Cleveland outfielder trying to steal. In the fifth, with Sewell on first, Cleveland tried the hit and run, but Miller again called for a wide ball. O'Neill threw his bat at it, but missed, and Sewell was easily trapped at second.

Two men were trapped off first in the game. In the fourth O'Neill caught Neis with a lightning throw to Burns. Evans was caught napping in the eighth by Smith.

Princeton, Dartmouth, Army, Boston College, Lehigh, Rutgers, The College of William and Mary, and the first named rely almost exclusively on the direct passing system in making their gains. Those in the second continue to use the quarterback, much as they did in the good old days.

To our way of thinking the first group has the edge on the second, which, of course, may or may not be due to the use of the direct pass. But at any rate such seems to be the case. And what is more, we think games between the two groups are generally more spectacular and swifter than those played between teams of the second division. But, of course, this is all a matter of opinion and circumstance.

In brief here are the arguments pro and con. Direct passing game speeds up attack, enables backs to form interference more quickly, adds one more player to interference, enables offense to get more drive into line plungers; against, fans of direct pass may mean touchdowns for defense; cannot conceal plays as well, restricts variety of plays, does not slow up attack. Draw your own conclusions.

We think "Buck" O'Neill, Columbia coach, has the right idea in defending the goal posts on a kick from touch-down. Saturday the Blue and White mentor used Johnson, his center, as the lone defender. Said it was useless to employ more.

"Why should I drape my players on the goal posts for the purpose of blocking such kick when none of them are ever blocked," he said. "They might better be resting for further play."

"Buck" Harris, Columbia quarterback, who, by the way, runs with the ball much like Davies, of Pitt, is a nifty basketball player, we are told, and is expected to shine on the court against the Blue and White basketball team. Billy Graves, Penn state basketball player, as an end for his eleven, while up at Dartmouth Buster Browne, a star basketball performer, is making a strong bid for a line position.

Turning the tables seems to be the new game on the gridiron this fall—witness State's triumph over Dartmouth and Columbia's victory over New York University. Will this continue in succeeding weeks? Time only will tell. We're looking for two more Saturday, Pitt at Syracuse and Yale vs. Boston College.

Burns's Double in Sixth Sends Speaker Home as Mails Wins Mound Duel

tossed his bat toward the dugout. Myers lifted an easy one to "Smoky Joe" Wood. Konechey drove a clean single to right and then the Cleveland infield started to kick up.

Peterkin Kilduff rapped an easy one down to Sewell, the University of Alabama alumnus, and Sewell kicked it across the green. Miller rapped one of the same brand to Larry Gardner and Larry naved at it until the slow-moving Dodger backstop reached first. This packed the bases and gave Sergeant Sherrod Smith a chance to help himself considerably, but the Sergeant lifted one into short center which is no place to hit a pill when Tris Speaker is ranging the territory.

Disaster seemed about to hit Sergeant Smith right behind the ear in the third half of the second, but little Peterkin Kilduff helped to block the blow. Burns got a base on balls and was forced at second. Wood, old Smoky Joseph himself, rapped a single to Jack Sheehan, and Gardner to third. Sewell hit one to Kilduff, who passed to the plate, and Otto Miller, sitting peacefully on the path, blocked Gardner into the stands with a savage drive, but the stocky son of the Omaha stockyards smothered the ball and touched second for a force out.

Secretary Baker in Box

The multitude started to settle in the seats for one of those somber things they call a "pitcher's duel," for nothing of moment happened in the third inning. It looked as though the two left-handers were about set to keep them there until dusk.

With one out in the fourth, Myers singled to right and the Bohemian, Bill Kilduff, hoisted to Wood and Otto Miller lifted one to Evans. Secretary of War Newton G. Baker, in a strategic position in an upstairs box, did not look as though he was going to remind him of the Democratic campaign—no pep. And nobody going anywhere. In the Indian half there was a new flourish out powerfully.

In the fifth, Sherrod Smith interrupted the calm by squawking rancorously when Tommy Connolly called a third strike on him. The earnest O'Neill, Sewell, reacted in the air for Olsen gave speaker a short exercise gallop to nail a fly and Sewell, after juggling the pill nervously, threw out Sheehan.

Indian Drive Ended Quickly

The local bugs started to clamor for some action to be taken when the Indians came to bat, and something almost did. Young Joseph Sewell singled to center. The Indians tried the hit and run play. Smith had a lunch and made a nut out of it. Miller made three to Olson and Sewell was nailed at second. That stopped anything even remotely resembling a drive in that inning.

There was some discrepancy in evidence in the sixth, when Bernie Neis was given a base on balls. Neis moved just a little too far from the bag and was nailed by a snappy throw by Steve O'Neill. Sewell reacted in the air for a bounding drive by Wheat and caught the Dodger captain with a line throw to first. The local bugs roared in relief.

The crash came in the Indian half of the sixth, with two out. Tris Speaker slashed a single into left field. Cleveland George Burns, who does the first job against left-handers, showed that he can hit the post-steroids. He cracked one that bounded against the center field wall for a two-bagger and Speaker scored.

Home Fans Test Lungs

The local inmates rose on their hind legs and roared like the wild beasts in the cage when the home bays quick pass by Sherrod Smith. It looked as though the "Duster" would hold out indefinitely unless some fiend in human form put him off his stride, extended chest with a run. In that case the "Duster" might have blown with a noise like a punctured tire.

Wheat Spoils Home Run

Evans got a single, with one out, in the Cleveland section of the eighth, but it was caught off the bag by quick pass by Sherrod Smith. It looked for a moment as though Wambagans, author of the triple play unassisted, might get a home run into the left center section of the multitude, but Wheat made a running catch and spread the pill with his back against the wall.

Myers was spectacular in the ninth, but it meant nothing in this series. With one out he rapped one to Sewell, and as the Cleveland rookie juggled the ball for an instant he dived across the bag for a rather absurd of a throw and plowed through the grass safe. Konechey forced him at second and Metaine was sent in to run.

Kilduff dug his toes into the dirt and tried to drive into the stevedore passengers in left, but it was just a foot or so short. Evans got under it and the game was through. So, it seemed, were the Dodgers, so far as the present series is concerned.

Marquard to Answer 'Scalping' Charge Oct. 15

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—Pitcher Rube Marquard, of the Brooklyn National League team, charged with ticket scalping, will answer the charge in the world's series being played here, appeared in Municipal Court to-day and was given a continuance until October 15. Marquard was one of twelve ticket "scalping" cases heard during the forenoon.

The Brooklyn twirler when he faced Judge Silbert personally requested that the charge be carried over until later in the week, and after listening to Marquard's plea Judge Silbert fixed next Friday as the day for a hearing. Marquard is expected to be Manager Robinson's pitching selection for the last game of the series here to-morrow, and it is thought he will not be required to return immediately to Brooklyn with the team in case the series carries over to a final decision in the East.

Record of Pitched Balls Gives Mails An Edge on Smith

CLEVELAND, Oct. 11.—Analysis of the pitching records in to-day's game shows that Mails and Smith were working on the batters in much the same fashion. The Cleveland hurler's superiority lay entirely in the fact that he allowed fewer hits and scattered them better than his opponent.

Mails threw the ball to the batters 90 times, while Smith's efforts totaled 103 in eight innings. The local lad shot over 28 strikes, 16 foul strikes, 33 called balls, 2 fouls; forced 15 men to go out on flies and 12 on grounders. He allowed three hits in as many innings.

Smith twirled 27 strikes, 5 foul strikes, 40 called balls, 3 fouls, retired 4 batters on flies and 11 on rollers. He allowed seven hits, 15 fouls, but only in the fifth when Speaker's single and Burns's double scored Cleveland's run, could hit Indians get more than one safe blow to an inning.
